

SYNOPSIS

Profiling in Criminal Psychology

Profiling in der Kriminalpsychologie

One principle is paramount: No one can hide behind himself. For every crime, countless individual decisions have to be made. These decisions distinguish the criminal, his motive, and his modus operandi. Profiling is the art of describing an unknown person. Profilers are called in whenever conventional investigations get stalled. A pure analyst can advance an investigation significantly by purposeful combination of information. This is illustrated by the solutions of the RAF terror and the Austrian letter bomb series. The documentary shows the great potential of today's profilers and advances the political discussion of it.
