

SYNOPSIS

Paradise in the Mountains

Paradies in den Bergen

Katja is the chief editor at a Leipzig newspaper. Her husband Erik is a successful lawyer. But their domestic harmony has been troubled for some time now. Their busy career schedules leave them little time to care for their son Christopher who, feeling neglected, has developed breathing problems. After a serious respiratory attack Katja realises that she must take Christopher to the mountains in Austria. When Erik shows up with news that he has been offered a job in Prague, intending to present his family with a fait accompli, a fight breaks out. Unnoticed by his parents, Christopher, who has heard every word of the argument, runs into the forest. A search party is formed to find him.
