Karajan - Osaka-Konzerte

Herbert von Karajan had an exceptionally close relationship to Japan. He had his first appearance as a guest conductor with the NHK Symphony Orchestra in 1954. A few months later - after Furtwängler's death - he came to Tokyo and Osaka in 1984 on his first world tour with his Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra. At this celebrated appearance in the Symphony Hall Osaka he performed Mozart's Divertimento No. 15, Richard Strauss's Don Juan and Respighi's Pini di Roma. If you want to experience how popular Karajan was in Japan, you have the best possibility to do so with this recording.
