

SYNOPSIS

Grossglockner Rush, The

Glocknersturm

Too many names inscribed in the copper plates - mountain climbers all of them, doomed to death on the Großglockner in tragic accidents ever since it was first conquered back in 1800. Scientists and scholars in the early days, mountaineering enthusiasts later - and the masses of people today: they have all attempted to climb the 3798m summit. The camera team watches the doings of the mountain climbers for three days - on the summit and in the much-feared "Glocknerscharte" - often not believing their eyes: up to 50 people at times, simultaneously pushing for the top of the narrow crest - solo climbers without a rope or any other precaution, people with a fear of heights and no experience whatsoever, men and their dogs...
