

SYNOPSIS

Tuareg - Desert People in Transition

Tuareg - Ein Wüstenvolk im Wandel

When these states became independent, the land of the Tuareg was split into individual sectors, making them a minority with few rights of their own. As a result, the Tuareg depend on traditional structures to ensure their survival. Agadez in the north of Niger bordering on Algeria is one of the larger Tuareg cities, where Eva Gretzmacher, an Austrian, lives and acts as a point of contact for travellers and artists from Europe. She also looks after various development projects in her capacity as representative of the Society for Threatened People.
